Principles determined by the Board for publicly traded joint stock companies are complied with in dividend distribution.

2-) Net period and past year losses in the company's financial statements must be offset against appropriate equity items. However, past year losses that cannot be offset due to legislation or due to creating tax liabilities may be subject to deduction in determining net distributable profit.

3-) Unless reserves required to be set aside by TCC and CMB provisions and the first dividend determined for shareholders in the articles of association are set aside, no other reserves can be set aside, profit cannot be transferred to the next year, and profit cannot be distributed.

The Board of Directors establishes internal control systems, including risk management and information systems and processes that can minimize the effects of risks that may affect the stakeholders of the company, primarily shareholders, taking into account the opinion of the relevant board committees.

The Board of Directors reviews the effectiveness of risk management and internal control systems at least once a year. Information regarding the existence, operation, and effectiveness of internal controls and internal audit is given in the activity report.

It is essential that the powers of the chairman of the board of directors and the executive chairman/general manager are clearly separated and expressed in the articles of association so that this separation is explicit. No one in the company is equipped with unlimited decision-making power single-handedly.

In the event that it is decided that the chairman of the board of directors and the executive chairman/general manager be the same person, this matter is presented to the information of shareholders at the general assembly with its justification, and the justification is included in the activity report.

The Board of Directors plays a pioneering role in maintaining effective communication between the company and shareholders, resolving any disputes that may arise, and acts in close cooperation with the Corporate Governance Committee and Investor Relations Department for this purpose.

Structure of the Board of Directors

The structure of the board of directors is stated in article 16 of our articles of association. With the condition that the number of board members is not less than 5 in any case, it is organized in a way that enables board members to make efficient and constructive decisions, make fast and rational decisions, and the formation and operation of committees to be effective.

There are executive and non-executive members in the board of directors. Non-executive board members consist of members who do not have any administrative duties in the company outside of board membership and do not interfere in daily work and routine activities. The majority of board members consist of non-executive board members, and there are 2 independent members appointed from outside. Non-executive board members consist of members who have the qualification to perform their duties without being under any influence. It is possible for independent board members to be elected by being re-nominated. The term of office of independent board members is up to three years. A person who has served as a board member for more than ten years in the last ten years cannot be appointed as an independent member to the board of directors.

Form of Board of Directors Meetings:

The board of directors convenes with a frequency that enables it to perform its duties effectively. The chairman of the board of directors determines the agenda of the board of directors meetings by consulting with other board members and the executive chairman/general manager. Members show care to participate in every meeting and express their opinions. The board of directors meeting can be attended through any technological method providing remote access. To ensure equal information by providing information and documents related to the subjects on the agenda of the board of directors meeting in advance, they are presented for the examination of board members a sufficient time before the meeting. Before the meeting, a board member can make a proposal for changes in the agenda to the chairman of the board of directors. The opinions of a member who cannot attend the meeting but notifies the board of directors in writing of their views are presented to the information of other members. Every member has one vote in the board of directors.

How board of directors meetings will be held is brought into writing with internal regulations.

Subjects on the agenda in board of directors meetings are discussed openly and with all aspects. The chairman of the board of directors shows utmost effort to ensure the active participation of non-executive members in board meetings. The board member has the reasonable and detailed dissenting opinion regarding the subjects they voted against entered into the decision minutes.

In board of directors decisions regarding all kinds of related party transactions of the company and the giving of guarantees, pledges, and mortgages in favor of third parties, the approval of the majority of independent members is sought. In case the majority of independent members do not approve the transaction in question, this situation is announced to the public within the framework of public disclosure regulations, and the transaction is submitted to the general assembly approval. In general assembly meetings to be held for such situations, the parties to the transaction and related persons cannot vote, and other stakeholders are ensured to participate in such decisions at the general assembly. Meeting quorums are not sought in general assemblies to be held for the situations specified in this article, and the resolution quorum is decided by the majority of those attending the meeting. Board of directors and general assembly resolutions taken contrary to the principles specified in this paragraph are considered invalid. A board member who is a party to related party transactions does not vote in related board of directors meetings. The place in the board of directors and decision quorum is given in the articles of association.

A board member allocates sufficient time for company affairs. In the event that a board member is an executive or board member in another company or gives consultancy services to another company, it is essential that the said situation does not cause a conflict of interest and does not prevent the member from performing their duty in the company. In this context, taking on another duty or duties outside the company by a member is bound to certain rules or restricted. By making a distinction between intra-group and extra-group selection of the board member outside the company, it is presented to the information of shareholders at the general assembly where the election is discussed.

Committees can invite any manager they deem necessary to their meetings and take their opinions. Committees benefit from independent expert opinions on matters they deem necessary in connection with their activities.
